Re: York University Administrative Infraction

In accordance with Section 90.40 – Conduct and Enforcement: Complaints, Investigation and Discipline Policy of the 2007 Canadian Interuniversity Sport (CIS) Policies and Procedures, I have considered a self-disclosure submitted by Ken Schildroth, Manager of Interuniversity Sport, York University. The self-disclosure details a breach of CIS Regulation 40.10.4.3.2 – Maximum Years, specifically with respect to the participation of a women's track & field student-athlete during the 2006 winter term.

Upon reviewing the Record of this matter, I have determined that there are grounds for a formal charge. It is my view that York University, inclusive of track & field coach Colin Inglis, breached CIS regulations as a result of the participation of Erica Broomfield in one competition in academic year 2006-07 (the 26th Annual Can Am Track Classic Hosted by the University of Windsor on January 12-13, 2007). Effectively, a January-entering student-athlete was placed into competition by a coach despite the student-athlete not being listed on the respective Eligibility Certificate.

Pursuant to Policy 90.40.4.12, I consider the breach to be an inadvertent administrative infraction that is not regularly and consistently occurring at the institution. Although there was consideration given to a possible similar infraction from 2002 that involved coach Colin Inglis, which was not concluded through the discipline process, I am satisfied that the current self-disclosure is such that it does not warrant a discipline hearing otherwise specified to take place pursuant to Policy 90.40.5.

It is my opinion, which is supported by the Investigation Report that was compiled by the CIS Director of Operations, Tom Huisman, that York University has a satisfactory eligibility monitoring and verification system. It is noted that York University identified the breach within days of its occurrence. Further, I have reviewed the specific recommendations and actions taken by the institution that provide reasonable assurance that such an infraction will not be repeated.

Notwithstanding the above, York University is fined $750 for the administrative errors that led to the breach of CIS regulations, plus $150 in costs to resolve this matter.

The above statements and determinations are made without prejudice and subject to change should subsequently discovered facts or evidence suggest otherwise.
